Applied Psychology.—This was before the day of ration cards, of course. A certain man's wife was in poor health and her doctor insisted that she needed more physical exercise. "But, doctor," protested the husband, "I can't get her to go outside the house." "Nonsense," said the doctor. "Mark all the bargain advertisements in the paper—and give her $25.00."

Efficiency, Plus.—The landlord of offices tenanted by a firm of Scottish lawyers whose lease was about to expire wrote to ask whether they were going to continue in occupation. Their reply was: "Dear Sir: We are. Yours Truly. ——" Not appreciating this effort in economy of words—and paper—the landlord wrote again to demand whether or not it was their intention to remain. The reply came promptly, and briefly: "Dear Sir: We remain. Yours Truly——."

Handicaps of the Hearing.—The patient was explaining to the doctor that he could not sleep; even the slightest sound upset him and kept him awake. Further questioning developed the fact that the chief cause for his wakefulness was the yowling of a cat. The doctor turned and wrote out a prescription. "Just put this in a small bowl of milk," he said, "and I think your trouble will be relieved." "But how do I take it—all at once?" asked the patient. "You do not take it," explained the doctor, gravely. "You give it to the cat."

Harder: They say paper can be used to keep a person warm.

Herring: It sure can. I had a mortgage that kept me sweating for nearly 20 years.

Gourmet.—A man entered a bar and ordered whiskey to be served in a wine glass. When it was put before him, he poured the liquor on the floor, ate the top of the glass, and threw away the base and stem. Then he stalked out of the place. "Funny guy, that," remarked the barman, staring after him in amazement. "He must be crazy." "He sure must be," agreed the other man. "He's thrown away the best part of the glass."

Directions Given.—A gangster walked into a bank and made a clean sweep of its funds. While he was stuffing the money into a bag the cashier managed to set off the burglar alarm and the gangster dashed for his car and drove off. Soon the police came. "Which way did he go?" panted an officer. The cashier pointed down the street, and the police hurried off. Just then a depositor came in, unaware of what had happened. "Good morning!" he cried cheerfully, handing in a check. "I'd like to draw $500 from my account." The cashier pointed out the door. "Yes, sir," he advised. "Just follow those policemen."
